

ABSTRACT

A chair, in particular an office chair, comprising:

- a base structure,
- a seat support structure, articulated to the base structure around a transverse axis,
- an adjustable elastic device to apply an elastic force between the base structure and the seat support structure,
- a manually operated adjustment device for varying the distance between said adjustable elastic device and said transverse axis.

(Figure 10)